

Dr. Janice Nadeau is a pioneer and one of our most respected leaders in the field of grief and loss, and her presentations reflect her tremendous clinical wisdom and experience. I have heard Jan speak many times and I always come away with a new idea or insight that enhances my clinical work and that inspires me as a clinician and researcher. Jan is not just a noted author, researcher, and clinician--she is an experience that all those who work with individuals and families facing grief, loss, and life-threatening illness should have.

Dale Larson, Ph.D.

Professor: Department of Counseling Psychology, Santa Clara University

Fellow: American Psychological Association

Author: The Helper's Journey: Working with People Facing Grief, Loss, and Life-Threatening Illness.